

A Great Horned Owl is perched on a large, light-colored rock in a dark, rocky cave. The owl has prominent ear tufts and bright yellow eyes. The background consists of jagged, brownish rock formations.

*New Mexico
Journal of Science*

Volume 43, No. 1, 2003

Joseph Sabutis and Jayne Aubele, Editors

New Mexico Academy of Science

Table of Contents

Distribution Records and Natural History Notes for Uncommon Mammals on the Llano Estacado of Eastern New Mexico

By Jennifer K. Frey

Community Classification Within Three Vegetative Zones of the East Side of the Jemez Mountains, New Mexico

By Shelley L. Gardner, Brian P. Oswald, Kenneth W. Farrish and Carl Edminster

Bubble-Based REsonance-Doppler Sensor for Liquid Characterization

By Naveen Sinha

Isolation and Purification of a Membrane-associated Progesterone Receptor in Amphibian Oocytes

By Zhiming Liu, Ram Pendey, and Mary Plasterer

GENERAL NOTES

Prey Remains Found in Great Horned Owl (Bubo virginianus) Pellets from Union County, New Mexico

By Jan F Kamler, Warren B. Ballard, James C. Bullock, David A. Butler and Ryan L. Ward